The Bay Area Transit Transformational Action Plan rightfully calls for “Near Term Action” in addition to the broader Long Term goals of collaboration to improve Bay Area Transit connectivity and efficiency.

Although I am a big fan of the DTX Portal project, I suspect (at age 72), I may never see this project to completion. In the interim time period, a dedicated ShuttleBus could be implemented to connect CalTrain 4th/King Station to Salesforce Transit Center to Ferry Building to BART/MUNI. The ShuttleBus should be a low-floor design (similar to those found at airports) and meet all arriving trains at 4th/King. The ShuttleBus would travel on a continuous counter-clockwise loop as shown on the attached map. The ShuttleBus would serve as a safe, seamless connection to all major downtown San Francisco transit systems (including Amtrak Connector Bus to/from Emeryville Station).
